NSF, Lego Foundation, and it would be nice to have institutions pay a membership fee. Fundraisers

International funds? UN agency? Organizations valuing creativity

The business structure will define the funding model

University host to contribute in kind resources

Sponsors, services with vetted professionals

By services, membership fees (individual, organizations, students), donations, grants

MembershipsConsultants

Organize a board with members who have connections to grant agencies

Grants, Trading of expertise with universities, board members with lots of connections, creative currency,, legacy donations.

Matching funds, creative currency, grants, kids fund, six principles.

Need central staff; intetships/co-ops; funding for kids; funding for conferences; sponsorships: in kind services

1. Commons need to have clearly defined boundaries. In particular, who is entitled to access to what? Unless there's a specified community of benefit, it becomes a free for all, and that's not how com

Foundations, corporations pay for services, EU funding?

Charge corporations for use of a tool or metric

Use federal funding on specific projects for creativity. There is federal funding for resource and program development that could be tapped into. I like non-profit structure.
